FIRST ORDINANCE PASSED BY BOARD UNDER NEW CHARTER

Is Not Effective Within Twenty Days After its Publication—Ordinance Regulates use of Vapor Lighting Systems—Referendum Clause of the New Charter.

At last night's meeting of the Board of Aldermen the first ordinance to be passed under the initiative and referendum clause of the new charter was adopted by a unanimous vote. The ordinance was drawn to regulate the use of vapor lighting systems and was prepared some months ago by Alderman Clendenin at the request of the Fire Commission.

The ordinance prescribes that persons engaged in installing vapor and gasoline lighting systems must hold a certificate to show they are competent to install said system and must secure license. The system after being installed shall be inspected by the building inspector after the same manner that electric wiring is inspected at present. The tanks are to be on the outside of the building and at least a foot from the building and three feet from a window or door.

The new ordinance is not effective for twenty days and not then if 25 per cent of the registered voters protest against the passage of said ordinance and if the aldermen persist in enforcing it then the proposition will have to be voted on at the coming election in May. Regarding the passage of ordinances paragraph 5 of subsection h of section 29 of the new charter says:

"No ordinance passed by the Board of Commissioners, unless otherwise expressly provided, except an ordinance for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety, which contains a statement of its urgency, and is passed by a two-thirds vote of the Board of Commissioners, shall go into effect before twenty days from the time of its final passage and publication in the daily papers then published in Greensboro; and if during said twenty days a petition, signed by electors of the said city equal to the number prescribed herein to be signed to a petition for the recall of any official protesting against the passage of such ordinance, be presented to the Board of Commissioners, the operation of such ordinance shall thereupon be suspended, and it shall be the duty of the Board of Commissioners to consider such ordinance, and if the same is not entirely repealed, the Board of Commissioners shall submit to the qualified voters the question of the repeal of such ordinance at an election to be held for that purpose, in the manner and under the conditions herein provided for reference to voters of the question of recall of an official."

DEBS ARRIVES THIS AFTERNOON; LECTURES TONIGHT

Eugene V. Debs will arrive in Greensboro this afternoon and will deliver a lecture at the Grand tonight. He is expected to come here on Southern train No. 36, which is due to arrive at 1:20 p. m.

Mr. Debs has been well received on his Southern tour, from one to five thousand persons constituting his audiences in the several cities in which he already appeared. Doubtless he will have a fair-sized audience here.

Citizens of the city who wish to show Mr. Debs special consideration during his visit are planning to give him an automobile ride around the city and out to the Battle Ground. It is also planned to tender him a supper at the Guilford. The automobile party will be headed by E. A. Brown and other prominent citizens.

The theatre will be opened at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night and at eight o'clock Mr. Brewer, Mr. Debs' manager, will make a short talk in regard to the career of the lecturer. Attorney David Stern will introduce Mr. Debs.

Mr. Debs goes from here to Norfolk to deliver a lecture, and will spend about two weeks more completing his tour of the South.

The Guilford County Good Roads Association will hold its annual meeting this morning in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce, McAdoo building. A number of matters of business will come up for transaction and the annual election of officers will take place. It is urged that all members be present.

HISTORY OF PUBLIC UTILITIES LEGISLATION

Act Prescribes Usual Machinery for Bond Issues---Tree Surgery Practiced.

Raleigh, March 24.—There has been so much discussion of the act of the recent legislature to empower cities and towns to own and operate their own public utilities that some history of the enactment of the bill into law will be of interest. It was a bill to be entitled an act to amend chapter 73, revisal of 1905 and was introduced in the house February 2 by Taylor of Brunswick. It went to the committee on counties, cities and towns and came with favorable report from that committee and suggestion that it go to judiciary committee No. 2 as to legal status. This was February 9. On February 17 it came from this committee with unfavorable report as to the bill and favorable report as to a committee substitute that finally passed into law. That day it passed second reading without opposition and then passed final reading February 25 and was sent to the senate where it passed in due time and was enrolled for ratification. The act prescribes the usual machinery for bond issues for establishing municipal public utilities and prescribes that where private or quasi public concerns have been allowed to establish such utilities these must be secured by purchase of condemnation instead of being driven out of business.

Tree Surgery In Capitol Square.

Six dollars per day for six men is being expended just now by the council of state, or more strictly speaking, the board of public buildings and grounds, composed of practically the same officers, in the work of scientifically treating the giant oaks in the capital square, a work that has been in progress the past week and will probably require a couple of weeks longer if all the trees are put in proper shape. The latest tree surgery is being applied and it is being found that the most of the trees are even much more decayed and in need of the treatment than was thought to be the case. It develops that some provision must be made for the large number of squirrels that live in the square and have lived in the holes in the trees that are not "plugged."

The remains of Rev. W. L. Cunningham, the Edenton Street Methodist church pastor and secretary of the North Carolina Methodist Conference, who died here early in January were this afternoon carried to Nashville, Tenn., for final interment, they having been stored in a vault temporarily the past two months. The remains were accompanied by a party of friends. Rev. H. M. North has since been assigned to the Edenton Street church pastorate.

STEAMSHIP COMPANY FINED $20,000 FOR VIOLATING THE LAW

Savannah, Ga., March 24.—The Merchants & Miners' Transportation Company was fined $20,000 by Judge Emory Speer in the United States circuit court today pursuant to its conviction last Friday for violating the interstate commerce act. The court intimated that when the formal sentence was drawn this afternoon it would be specified on what counts the fines should be placed. He stated also that sentence would be deferred on the other counts pending the good behavior of the company. He characterized the finding of the jury as absolutely fair and said the company had been guilty of a flagrant violation of the law. It is generally believed the fine of $20,000 will apply to one of the twenty four counts of the indictment and the sentence on the rest will be suspended. The amount of bond for an appeal will be agreed upon this afternoon by the government attorneys and counsel. The Merchants & Miners attorneys state with emphasis they will appeal the case.

OLIVER YORK CLAIMS DAMAGES FROM CITY IN SUM OF $5,000

Alleges he Received Injuries Because of Negligence of City in Repairing Street—Fire Apparatus Bought.

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held last night, the session lasting two hours. Mayor Stafford presided and every member of the board was in his chair. The business was mostly routine.

The matter of most interest to the general public was the filing of a claim by Oliver York, through his attorney, G. M. Patton, against the city of Greensboro for damages in the sum of $5,000 for injuries alleged to have been sustained on Sept. 14, 1910, by reason of the negligence of the city in not keeping a certain street in passable condition. In his claim Oliver recites that he was driving along Fields avenue at Spring street intersection and, a wheel of his buggy falling suddenly into a hole in said avenue, was thrown headlong from his buggy, breaking a leg and hurting his back considerably, causing a great deal of suffering, both mental and physical.

The members of the board stated that this was the first they had ever heard of the accident. Chief Neelley stated that one Oliver York had slipped on the ice and injured his spine more than a year ago and since that time had been convicted on the charge of retailing. He said that he did not know of another person by that name. The matter was referred to the city attorney and chief of police to investigate.

The committee appointed to investigate a proposition made by the Eagle Hose Company to purchase the belongings of the company reported that $400 had been decided on as a price satisfactory to all concerned. It was ordered that the city purchase the apparatus at this figure.

David Stern, representing Dr. C. W. Banner, asked permission to erect bill boards on Dr. Banner's vacant lot on North Elm street. This was granted, the bill boards to be erected according to specifications set forth in the bill board ordinance.

Hudson & Swift appeared before the board regarding the request of Messrs. Hudson & Moorefield to remit the license of $50 required to slaughter house operators. The matter was debated at length, final action being continued until the next meeting.

Inspector Milton called attention to the fact that an ordinance was needed to control the use and handling of gasoline and like oils of a combustible nature, stating that had the city such an ordinance a number of the recent fires could have been avoided. It was decided to adjourn to meet Monday night at 8 o'clock, at which time such an ordinance could be passed.

The city clerk was instructed to secure from the secretary of state a certified copy of the new charter.

A deed for Joyner street was tendered the city and the same was referred to the city attorney and the city clerk.

JOHN WYLIE WILL BE TRIED TODAY

In Municipal court yesterday morning John Wylie, the negro who attempted to assault Mrs. W. W. Leigh Thursday night, was arraigned on the charge of simple assault. Col. Barringer, who had been employed to defend the negro, asked that the case be continued until this morning in order to give him time to look into the matter and summon the necessary witnesses. Wylie was remanded to the calaboose to await trial.

Mrs. Leigh's statement regarding the negro's conduct, is not entirely in accord with Wylie's version of the affair. Her statement was given in yesterday's Telegram and yesterday a reporter talked with the negro. He said that Mrs. Leigh asked him to cut some wood and he did so, carrying it into the house. He said he had been drinking and as he returned he reeled and to prevent falling and falling against Mrs. [illegible] he caught her hand. She asked him what he meant and he apologized and left. He declared that she did not strike him.

In view of Mrs. Leigh's statement and the fact that Wylie was drinking at the time it would no doubt be an easy matter to convict him of an attempt to commit criminal assault. However, it is understood that Mrs. Leigh does not wish to send him to the state prison for the offense and will be satisfied with a verdict of guilty of simple assault.

The only other case before Judge Eure was that of Stanley Williams, who was charged with carrying a concealed weapon. He was fined $15 and costs. Williams is the negro who made at a fellow employe with a rolling pin Wednesday. The assault case was tried before Justice Collins, who suspended judgment on payment of costs.

THE ASHEBORO STREET REVIVAL.

Rev. Mr. Padgett preached a strong sermon on "Why Should I Be a Christian" at the Asheboro Street Baptist church last evening, a large congregation being present. Much interest was shown and there were several professions of conversion. There will be no services this afternoon, but services will be held tonight at the usual hour. Public invited.

District Attorney A. E. Holton, of Winston-Salem, was in the city on business yesterday.

TRAIN GUARD SHOT; STRIKERS STILL WAR ON C. N. O. & T. P.

Somerset, Ky., March 24.—A guard who was on the tender of a Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific Railroad freight train was shot and wounded in the leg near Elmwood, Tenn., last night, according to a dispatch received here today.

The conductor of a northbound passenger train reported that between Danville and Erlanger fully a hundred shots were fired at his train but that they did no particular damage.

The body of Carl Street, the strike-breaking fireman who was shot from ambush at Robbins, Tenn., yesterday, is being held until word is received from relatives as to its disposition. Street gave his home address as New York City.

TWO YOUNG WOMEN BURNED TO DEATH IN LAMP EXPLOSION

Wadesboro, March 24.—Miss Grace Baucom, age 17 and Miss Wilma Davis, aged 21 were burned to death when a lamp exploded in the home of H. L. Baucom, of Olive Branch in Union county last night, according to information received here this morning.

Miss Baucom is the daughter of H. L. Baucom, a farmer of Union county and Miss Davis is a daughter of Rev. C. L. Davis, a well known clergyman.

The young women were standing near the lamp when the explosion occurred and their clothing was saturated with blazing oil. Before the flames could be extinguished both were so badly burned that they died from the effects of their injuries.

GEORGIAN WAS EASY MARK FOR STRANGER IN NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, La., March 24.—Harry Dickson, of Columbus, Ga., passed over $100 so promptly to a newly made "friend" here yesterday that the latter decided it was not wise to let the Goober man burden himself with a big bank roll and accordingly increased the "touch" to $200. Dickson was so elated at the prospect of having an agreeable companion on his trip to El Paso that, notwithstanding the acquaintance of less than an hour, he proffered the necessary cash when his "friend" discovered that he would have to run over to the union station where he said he had left his baggage to get money to pay a freight bill of $86.

The stranger "reluctantly" accepted the five $20 bills which Dickson peeled from a big roll and profusely thanked the Georgian for saving him a 10-block walk to the station. He went in the freight office to settle the bill but in an instant returned to the sidewalk and handed the $100 back to Dickson. He would have to go to the station after all, for the freight bill was $186 instead of $86. "Tut, tut," said Dickson, who promptly peeled off an additional quintet of twenties and insisted on his friend accepting them. With the same show of reluctance the stranger took the $200 and went to settle his little freight bill. After waiting half an hour Dickson went out to look for his friend, and to his consternation discovered that it was not a freight office after all.

High School Societies Plan for Debate

In this, the second, year of their work, the Philomelian and Diaphesian debating societies of the Greensboro high school have achieved great success in promoting knowledge of oratory. As a climax to the year's work the societies are arranging an inter-society debate for commencement. Rivalry between the two is very keen. Elections were held by both yesterday afternoon. The Diaphesian society chose Chas. Mosely and Wills Hunter for their debaters; while Ralph Lewis and Willard Eutsler will defend the blue and white of the Philomelian.

Though not definitely decided, the question will probably be "Resolved that the United States should fortify the Panama Canal."

The societies also elected marshals for commencement and historians. The latter are E. Ray Bond, Philomelian, and L. Carroll Atkisson, Diaphesian. Forest Murray, Philomelian, is the chief marshall and he will be assisted by Ralph Lewis, Philomelian, Wm. Grimsley, Diaphesian, Herman Cone, Diaphesian, Misses Ruth Vanstory and Lucille Devlin from the Ionian literary society and Misses Mary Beall and Lynn Richardson from the McNeil literary society.

McRae Dalton, of Winston, was in the city yesterday.

New Local Tax Districts.

It is announced from the state department of education that seven new local tax districts have just been carried, one each in Anson, Jones, Onslow, Northampton and Wilkes and two in Robeson county. There are to be campaigns for local tax in many counties of the state during the spring, a number being already ordered and many others to be ordered at the April meetings of the county boards of education. The spreading of the "gospel of local tax for schools" so far as that work pertains to the state department of education is under the management of Mr. C. H. Mebane, of the department.

Prisoners Begin Sentences.

Henry Hyman, sentenced to eighteen years in the penitentiary for murder and Will Pitt, sentenced to one year for assault, were committed today to the prison to serve their terms, being brought here by Sheriff J. H. Page of Martin county.

The Y. M. C. A. Campaign.

Raleigh is to have only an eight day "whirlwind campaign" for the $65,000 Y. M. C. A. building fund if the plans of the management of the campaign opened today carries, the campaign to close on Saturday of next week. It started up today with the backing of the $5,000 subscriptions announced last night by four business men of the city—Ashby Baker, W. M. Williamson, C. J. Hunter and J. T. Pullen—and the organization for thorough canvass of the city is perfected in the typical Y. M. C. A. campaign manner. "The Conservation of Manhood" was the theme of the address last night at the conference dinner inaugurating the campaign, it being delivered by Hon. Jeter C. Pritchard, of the United States court. He took the position that there is in progress a deterioration of manhood in the boys of the rising generation and that the Y. M. C. A. is a powerful factor for conservation of this force so vital for the well being of mankind.

Senatorial Contest Rumors.

Ex-Gov. Charles B. Aycock is said to be receiving great numbers of letters from Democrats in various parts of the state urging him to declare himself as a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator F. M. Simmons, whose term expires two years hence. This movement is said to be due to the effort of certain Democratic leaders, terming themselves "progressives" to get out a candidate against both Senator Simmons and Gov. W. W. Kitchin, who is thus far the only known candidate against Senator Simmons. These

EUGENE V. DEBS.

Eugene V. Debs, who delivers a lecture at the Grand this evening, will no doubt be greeted by a large audience. While the actual number of followers of the Socialist leader is small in this city and section, the number of people who will desire to hear him is much greater. Hundreds of people who do not subscribe to Socialistic theories nor approve of Mr. Debs' ideas will, nevertheless, accord him the courtesy of a hearing; and it is unquestionably true that all will be repaid for the effort put forth in going out to the theatre to hear Mr. Debs. He is an orator of splendid ability, and the fact that he has a large personal following is evidence of his magnetism and capacity as a leader of men.

Those who do not accept the tenets of the Socialists and who desire to combat their theories should make it a point to hear the greatest leader the movement has produced in this country. After doing so they will be better prepared to controvert the errors of Socialism.

PROFITS OF THE "TELEPHONE TRUST" AND THE DEMAND FOR GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company earned profits last year amounting to $51,000,000, according to the statement made by the company's board of directors to the stockholders. The figures presented in the annual report of this concern are enormous in their proportions and show that the telephone business is one of towering and increasing magnitude. For example, the report shows that the increased income of the Bell Telephone Company was $16,000,000 and that the gross revenue amounted to $165,000,000. The net revenue of the telegraph business amounted to almost thirty-two million dollars. Some figures culled from the report are as follows:

The gross revenues collected from telephone service in 1910 by the Bell system—not including the connected independent companies—was $165,000,000, an increase of nearly $16,000,000. Of this operation consumed $54,000,000; taxes, $8,000,000; current maintenance, $25,700,000, and provision for depreciation, $26,200,000. The surplus available for charges, etc., was $51,000,000, of which $11,550,000 was paid in interest and $25,000,000 was paid in dividends.

The report of the American Telegraph and Telephone Company alone shows net revenue for the year of $31,933,214, out of which interest amounting to $5,077,321 and dividends of $20,776,822 were paid. The balance, $6,079,071, was an increase over last year, notwithstanding the increase in charges due to the conversion of bonds into shares. The number of shareholders is 40,381.

Passing from figures which stagger the average man's mental grasp in the consideration of gross business and net profits, it is worthy of note that the directors of this gigantic corporation reported to the stockholders that government control and regulation of public utilities is accepted as a necessity; and the further statement that regulation has to an appreciable extent allayed the demand for government ownership. They believe that federal and state supervision should stop at control and regulation and that governments should not undertake to manage or operate public utilities nor dictate to them beyond the requirements of the greatest efficiency and economy of public service. Some quotations from this section of the report are as follows:

"If there is to be State control and regulation, there should also be State protection—protection to a corporation striving to serve the whole community, some parts of whose service must necessarily be unprofitable, from aggressive competition which covers only that part which is profitable."

"Government control should protect the investor as well as the public. It should insure to the public good service and fair rates and insure fair returns to the investor. Through a wise and judicious State control all the advantages, without any of the disadvantages of State ownership, can be secured and State ownership doomed.

"Our policy in respect to the opposition and independent telephone systems has been consistently followed. Wherever it could be legally done during the last year, and done with the acquiescence of the public, opposition companies have been acquired and merged with the Bell system. There is no question but the public is tired of dual telephone exchanges and that so fast as confidence in protection against the real or imaginary evils of monopoly increases opposition against mergers will decrease."

These views of the men who control one of the largest, most far reaching and most profitable of the country's so-called trusts, are presented for what they are worth; while The Telegram does not fully agree with all the conclusions reached by the telephone magnates.

It is a fact that what the public wants from a telephone company is efficient and satisfactory service. This is true of all public service or public utility corporations. If the public is given satisfactory service at reasonable rates, the majority of citizens will be entirely satisfied. There will be some dissatisfaction with the best of public service, as it is literally impossible to please some people. The demand for government ownership of public utilities has arisen, however, because of lack of first class service on the part of public service corporations and because of overcharges; or because of the unfair and unbusiness-like treatment accorded the public by these corporations.

The corporations owning public utilities can, to a very large extent, weaken the movement for government ownership by a change of their policies and practices. In fact, a radical change of policy by all the big concerns of the country will eventually destroy the whole force of the government ownership movement. It remains to be seen if the big business interests controlling the great utilities of the country will exhibit the sound judgment of ordinary business men in their dealings with the public and adopt such a course. If they do not, the people will untimately be driven to the refuge of government ownership, and in the ensuing conflict with the masses the corporations are bound to lose, because the people are millions and big business men are few; and powerful as money and large business interests are, they have never been able to withstand the assaults of the wronged and enraged masses.

Government ownership of some classes of public utilities is probably desirable and distinctly beneficial to the public. That of other classes of public utilities is not. The owners of these utilities have it in their power to keep alive or kill the demand for government ownership of all public utilities. By giving the public courteous treatment, satisfactory service and by making the charges commensurate with the service and with the capital invested, the government ownership movement can be stayed and defeated. By giving the public bad treatment, inferior service at enormous profits and piling up immense dividends at the expense of a suffering and ill-used people, they can so strengthen the demand for government ownership that it will sweep the country and wipe out every public service corporation in existence or plunge the nation into anarchy and chaos.

The American people are long-suffering, and the vast majority of them are reasonable human beings. They are willing to meet the big business interests of the country on the middle ground of conciliation and adjustment; but they have doubtless fully determined to go no further than that. The differences which disturb the business, commercial and industrial interests of the country can be adjusted in the right way and in justice to all concerned, if Big Business is willing to meet the Common People on the terms which all honest men must agree are fair and right.

In the meantime, The American Telephone and Telegraph Company ought to be able to give the highest class of service at the minimum cost, with that annual profit of $51,000,000 staring its directors in the face.

THE REWARD.

We sent our son to college,
We're tickled—yes, indeed!
The higher education
Has filled his every need.
It makes past any doubting,
Success an easy thing.
A big league team, he tells us,
Will take him South this spring.

His mother hoped to see him
Well up in classic lore,
She rather leaned to writting.
What, pray, is bookish knowledge
Unto a pitching wing?
He'll train with the big leaguers
Down South this very spring.

It's cost us lots of trouble,
Not speaking of the cash;
But, since rewards come swiftly,
Repining would be rash.
The money and the worry—
It's all worth while, by jing!
A big league team will try him.
He trains down South this spring.

Jury of Joneses Acquits Jones.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 24.—Frank Jones, charged with vagrancy, was freed by a jury on which three men of the name of Jones sat, each of whom contributed one dollar to the defendant.

Wedded 50 Years, Seeks Divorce.

Washington, D. C., March 24.—After half a century of wedded life, Mrs. Osee W. Pitts, 66 years old, has sued her husband, Edward Pitts, 70 years of age, for divorce because he followed her about the house reading the Bible to her.

ACCORDIN' TO REGULATIONS.

Law Is All Right When Not Interpreted by "Fernatics."

"What's eatin' ye, Jason?" inquired the hardware man pleasantly as his aged customer, doubtless thinking of something else, picked a tenpenny nail from the barrel and started to nibble at the head.

"What's eatin' me? Well, I been to the fair—that's what's eatin' me. I been to the fair."

"Wa'n't the fair good enough?"

"Good enough," snorted the pleasure seeker. "Too durn good—that's what was the trouble with it. Yes, sir, if anybody had told me what I was goin' to run up agin at that fair I wouldn't have believed 'em. Right smack up on horticultural hall, where nobody could miss it, was the sign, 'No Liquor, Gambling or Immoral Shows Allowed on the Grounds.'"

"Of course," said the hardware man, "that's the very sign you put up yourself when you was secretary of the association fifteen years ago."

"S'pose it was! S'pose it was! That ain't any reason, is it, why I sh'd tramp around to five different refreshment stands and wink at every sep'rate stand and not find a thing harder'n soft cider? It ain't any reason why I sh'd walk my legs off lookin' for a place to lay a few dimes on the red or black and not find nothin' but spindle machines givin' chances on breastpins and dollar watches. It ain't any reason why I sh'd pay 25 cents to see the big double show of oriental and Turkish dancers and not anything inside but a look at a lot of bum dance steps that could have been done just as well at a Sunday school picnic. I'm in favor of the law—yes, sir—but I don't want no law interpreted by a lot of durned fernatics. I want moderation, and I want a fair that ain't a ministers' convention nor yet a church social."—Horatio Winslow in Puck.

The Man Higher Up.

Crack! Crack! Crash!

The skaters turned and fled. But one, less fortunate than the rest, was overtaken by the widening crack, threw up his hands and fell in with a hearty splash.

"Help!"

"He's drowning!"

"Get a ladder!"

At last the ladder was procured. Cautiously approaching the pool, which was ornamented by the luckless man's head and shoulders, the park keeper placed the ladder in position and began to creep along it.

"Come in a bit closer!" he shouted.

"I can't swim," answered the impromptu bather.

"But you're only up to your armpits, man," said the park keeper. "You ain't got no need to swim. Walk."

"Walk be blowed!" responded the other. "This water's ten foot deep."

"Ten foot deep!" exclaimed the park keeper. "Then how are you keeping up?"

"How?" retorted the bather. "Why, I'm standing on the bloke that broke the ice!"—Answers.

"Foley's Honey and Tar is the best cough remedy I ever used as it quickly stopped a severe cough that had long troubled me," says J. W. Kuhn, Princeton, Nebr. Just so quickly and surely it acts in all cases of coughs, colds, lagrippe and lung trouble. Refuse substitutes. Howard Gardner.

THE ROSE'S FAIRY TALE

"Mother," fretted a little rosebud one warm summer night, "a star's shining in my eyes! Mother, a mosquito's singing so loud I can't sleep! Mother, won't you tell me a story?"

"Once upon a time," began mother as the full blown rose and the little rosebud rocked back and forth on the same stem, "there was a rose princess who lived in an enchanted garden."

"A garden like ours, with a jolly lattice for little rosebuds to climb?"

Mother nodded. "Only the princess was too majestic to climb. She lived in a green palace, a stately rose tree.

"THE BUTTERFLY STOOPED AND KISSED THE PRINCESS."

In all the summer world of roses there was none so beautiful as the princess, and"—

"I don't believe she was quite so beautiful as my mother!" tenderly interrupted the little rosebud.

The full blown rose laid her cheek against the little rosebud's pink forehead.

"Please go on, mother, dear."

"The princess always wore gowns of gold and for jewels pearls of sunlit dew. Naturally so lovely a creature had many to do her homage, but the most ardent of all her admirers was—whom do you suppose?"

In vain the little rosebud tried to guess.

"A caterpillar!"

"Not an ugly 'woolly bear' caterpillar."

"The very same! The beautiful princess, indignant at his attentions, spurned him as a worm, and the caterpillar crawled away in the dust."

"Poor fellow!" sighed the rosebud, for she was a sweet, tender hearted little thing.

"His hopeless love for the princess," mother sadly continued, "was so deep that life without her seemed worthless, and, stretching himself out on a leaf, the caterpillar refused to eat. Then something wonderful happened.

"'I'm your fairy godmother,' a silvery voice whispered in his ear. 'Whatever you wish I can give you if you will but confide in me.'

"At first the bewildered caterpillar thought he was dreaming, because he saw no one, not realizing that fairy godmothers are invisible. But soon he was pouring out his passion for the rose princess and her scorn of him on account of his ugliness.

"The silvery voice laughed. 'Have faith and patience and you shall have your heart's desire. Your rose is a golden princess of a garden. You shall be a golden prince of the air.'

"As the silvery voice died away there was a prick in the caterpillar's side like the touch of a fairy wand, and no longer could he see the bright green leaves about him, no longer could he see the dazzling sun over him, for a veil of silky film enveloped him, growing denser, fold upon fold, until all was dark and the caterpillar had fallen into a deep slumber."

"Was he dead?" the little rosebud breathlessly questioned.

"Indeed, no—only under a magic spell. But when he awoke he had very strange sensations. Instead of feeling heavy, clumsy and cross he was filled with the buoyant joyfulness of a bird awakened by the dawn.

"'Fly!' whispered the silvery voice. And like the same bird he darted forward.

"A-thrill with the new life, quivering with fear that he would fall to earth a groveling worm, he fluttered for rest upon a flower rimmed fountain in the midst of the enchanted garden. There in the mirror of the crystal water he beheld himself—a wonderful golden butterfly."

"And did he forget the princess?" impatiently asked the little rosebud.

"Not an instant. From the fountain the golden prince of the air winged his flight to the golden princess of the garden. The beautiful princess was leaning out of a window of the green palace gathering sunbeams. And when she lifted her head and saw the glorious butterfly hovering above her she loved him at first sight."

"And the butterfly?" the litttle rosebud murmured drowsily.

"The butterfly," concluded mother, "stooped and kissed the princess upon her forehead. And every sweet summer day they loved each other more perfectly, so that the two lived happily ever afterward and"—

With hushed lips the full blown rose rocked to and fro in the soft night breeze. The little rosebud had fallen fast asleep.—Washington Star.

THE STORY OF SUGAR CANE.

Although many plants are rendered valuable to man by the sugar which they contain, yet few of them possess this substance so abundantly as to render its extraction a profitable pursuit. From beetroot it is obtained in considerable quantities, but as a sugar producing plant nothing can compete with the tropical sugar cane, which may with truth be ranked as one of the most valuable products of the vegetable world.

The original home of this plant was most probably southeastern Asia, as the Chinese seem to have been the first people who knew both how to cultivate it and how to extract the sugar from its juice.

It was brought to Europe by the crusaders and in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries found its way into all European colonies within the tropics.

The discovery of America opened up a new and extensive soil for its culture, and it speedily became the principal source of wealth to European settlers in these regions.

The sugar cane is very like the common reed. It has a knotty stem, producing at each point a long pointed ribbon shaped leaf. Toward the period of its maturity the plants are crowned with a plume of what may be called silvery feathers, and at this stage of its growth the appearance of a field of sugar cane presents one of the most beautiful sights that can be imagined. The canes sometimes reach a height of twelve or fourteen feet.

When the plants are cut steam power is then employed to crush and press out every drop of the valuable juice, which must be at once boiled to prevent fermentation.

The sugar harvest is a time of the utmost activity; it is also a season of gladness to all. No doubt the work is very hard and the heat very trying, but so palatable and so nourishing is the juice of the cane that every creature employed in the work seems to derive health and vigor from its use. Even the little children who toddle about among their elders and who are continually sucking the pleasant cane become as round and fat as possible, while the horses and cattle, being indulged with plenty of the green tops of the plant, improve in health and strength more than at any other season of the year.

Unfortunately this valuable plant is liable to be destroyed by many enemies. Herds of monkeys destroy incredible quantities, while the common rat, which is found everywhere over the world, is fully as destructive.

The ravages of ants and land crabs are also very severe, while the sugar planter has to fear long continued drought or a furious tornado, either of which often destroys his hopes for a year.

It would be difficult to name every place where sugar is successfully cultivated. The West Indian islands, Brazil, the island of Mauritius, belonging to Great Britain, all these produce a large amount of sugar. In Mauritius alone there are nearly 300 sugar mills. This colony, small as it is, forms an important part of the British possessions on account of its valuable exports.

"That's what. Why, that girl can't recite the multiplication table without making the most elegant gestures."—Kansas City Journal.

GOWN FOR EASTER.

Two Toned Materials Popular This Season.

Apparel for Eastertide now is uppermost in the feminine eye. The accompanying picture shows one of the newest fancies in Easter gowns. Two toned materials are popular for this season. This frock consists of a combination skirt, the upper part being made of pale biscuit color serge and the lower part of dark brown. The skirt is made empire, and the jacket is one of the new Eton designs. The entire suit is made very attractive by the use of silk braid. The big hat worn with the costume is of tan chip with white pompon. The combination of gown and hat makes a stunning Easter outfit.

CARD FROM MR. WHARTON.

To the Voters:

My connection with city affairs in the past has given me an insight and knowledge of the needs of the community and I believe I am in a measure qualified to judge as to the type of men we should now have to manage our affairs under the new system in order that said system may prove a success and Greensboro be made to go forward and upward.

I believe we should select for the three commissioners the very best men to be secured in our midst, each man to be selected with respect to his peculiar fitness for the position to which he aspires.

I have known Ed. Brown for about 20 years and this means I know all about him there is to know and I do not hesitate to say I do not believe we can secure a better organizer nor a man better acquainted with business detail. I therefore heartily endorse his candidacy for commissioner of public safety and commend him to your suffrage.

Very truly,
E. P. WHARTON.

"Hubby" Must Wash Baby.

Wilkes-Barre, March 24.—Alderman Donohue of this city laid down the law to husbands today when he declared that it is the duty of the husband to wash and dress the baby if his wife is too busy with other household duties to give the child her attention. The fact that he was occasionally required to wash the infant was one of the causes which led Arthur Goulson of Plymouth to leave his wife and child and go to live with his mother. The wife followed him, and alleging the mother assaulted her, had her arrested.

The story came out at the hearing before Alderman Donohue today, and he explained with emphasis to Goulson what he considered the duties of a father and advised him to return to his wife and child and perform these duties.

Destructive Fire on Market Street

An alarm of fire yesterday morning at 11:35 o'clock brought the fire department to the building, 214-216 West Market street, where a blaze had originated in the Crescent Cleaning, Dyeing and Pressing club, owned by Miss Kate Kelly. The building was owned by W. G. Balsley, H. L. Hopkins and Dr. E. M. Humphrey and was occupied by Miss Kelly and B. MacKenzie. The loss will amount to several thousand dollars, partly covered by insurance.

The fire originated in the pressing club on the second floor. A can of gasoline became ignited in some manner and an explosion followed. The flames spread rapidly and despite the fact that water was on the blaze within a few minutes the flames were shooting through the windows with increasing fury. It was at first thought that the entire department would be needed and the second alarm was turned in. However, it was found that the blaze had not gotten a good start and the water soon called a halt in the progress of the flames. The pressing club was gutted by the flames. The principal damage done to the stock of goods carried by B. MacKenzie was by the streams of water which poured down from above.

Adjoining the building was the old Banner warehouse now used as a garage. In this a quantity of gasoline was stored and it was at first thought that the flames would be communicated to this building. The firemen mounted the roof of this building and poured a steady stream of water through the windows of the burning building.

The damage to the building was several hundred dollars, fully covered by insurance. The entire second floor was used by Miss Kelly, partly as a pressing club and partly as bed rooms. A number of suits in the place for cleaning were burned and Miss Kelly carried no insurance to cover the loss. The damage to the first floor was by water, the stock of heating apparatus carried by B. MacKenzie being thoroughly drenched. Dr. Humphrey had some of his household goods stored away on the first floor and these were thoroughly drenched also. The third floor was used for storage purposes.

Moses Pharr, a negro who was at work in the pressing club at the time of the gasoline explosion, stated that he had no idea as to how the combustible was ignited unless a spark blew in through a window. He said the can of gasoline was sitting on a table nearby and without warning exploded. His hands and face were burned by the flames. Pharr stated that he did not have a match or any fire about him.

GENUINE ECZEMA CURE.

New Remedy That Cures Eczema Quickly.

Howard Gardner has sold hundreds of jars of Hokara in the last few weeks, and although he offered to refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied purchaser, not one jar has been returned.

While this is surprising in itself, yet the most marvelous thing to him is the reports of chronic cases of eczema that have been cured by this simple skin food. People who have suffered with scales, scabs and even bleeding itching have found relief and cure in Hokara.

You can buy a liberal sized jar for 25c and with every package goes Howard Gardner's guarantee to refund the money if it is not satisfactory. Larger size, 50c.

TESTIMONIAL.

I wish to state for the benefit of anyone suffering from eczema, that I had eczema on my hand for some time and could find nothing that would cure it until I used Hokara. One 25c jar entirely cured me. Wm. Nichols, 621 1-2 Central Ave., Ft. Dodge, Iowa.

STORY OF AN INDIAN BOY

No people are possessed of a greater share of natural politeness than the Indians, wrote Isaac Weld in 1799. They will never interrupt while another is speaking, nor if one has told them anything which they think to be false will they bluntly contradict him. They deem it highly becoming in a warrior to accommodate his manners to those of the people with whom he may happen to be. The following anecdote is told by Mr. Weld in "How Our Grandfathers Lived:"

Our friend Nekig, the Little Otter, had been invited to dine with us at the house of a gentleman at Detroit, and he came accordingly, accompanied by his little son, a boy of nine or ten years.

After dinner a variety of fruits was served, and among the rest were some peaches, a dish of which was handed to the young Indian.

He helped himself to one with becoming propriety, but immediately afterward he put the fruit to his mouth and bit a piece out of it.

The father eyed him with indignation and spoke some words to him in a low voice which I could not understand, but which, on being interpreted by one of the company, proved to be a warm reprimand for his having been so deficient in observation as not to peel his peach as he saw the gentleman opposite him had done.

The little fellow was extremely ashamed of himself, but he quickly retrieved his error by drawing a plate toward him and peeling the fruit with the greatest neatness. Some drink to which he was afterward helped not being by any means agreeable to his palate, the little fellow made a wry face, as a child might naturally do. This called forth another reprimand from the father, who told him that he despaired of ever seeing him a great man or a good warrior if he appeared thus to dislike what his host had kindly given him. The boy took the rest of his drink with seeming pleasure.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Sailor's Wisdom.

A sailor who had already made several voyages to sea had engaged on board an Indiaman bound to China. This was a longer voyage than any he had yet made, and one of his friends endeavored to dissuade him, magnifying the danger and advising him to settle on shore.

"Nonsense," replied the Jack tar; "don't talk to me of danger. There is no more on sea than on shore."

"Let me ask you," said his friend, "what was your father?"

"He was a seaman."

"And where did he die?"

"He was lost in a shipwreck."

"And your grandfather?"

"He fell overboard and was drowned."

"And where did your great-grandfather die?"

"He perished in a vessel that struck against a rock."

"Then don't you think you are very foolhardy to go to sea and risk your life where so many of your family have perished?"

"And let me ask you," said the sailor, "where did your father die?"

"Why, in his bed, certainly."

"And your grandfather?"

"In his bed also."

"Then don't you think you are very foolish to go to bed, where so many of your ancestors have perished? Let me tell you that God protects his creatures as much at sea as on shore."

Greater Than They Look.

We all imagine a great man ought to look the part, and it is with a certain feeling of disappointment that we find a king in plain clothes looks like any other man and illustrious women look pretty much like other women, no matter what their accomplishments. One day, many years ago, a very little girl met General Grant face to face.

"This is General Grant," said her father, introducing her.

"Are you the great General Grant who fought all them battles?"

"Yes, I was in a good many battles," answered Grant, much amused.

The tot gazed wonderingly at the general and then quietly said, "Let's hear you holler!"

A grin is merely a conterfeit smile.

progressives are understood to be opposed to both Simmons and Kitchin and are insisting that a contest such as the Simmons-Kitchin one promises at this time to be would come near disrupting the party. And they believe that to make it a three cornered fight would lessen the shock of the contest and carry with it a possibility of getting in a senator thoroughly committed to their policies. However, ex-Gov. Aycock has said nothing that indicates his purpose to accede to these importunings. It was not many months ago, it is pointed out, that he made the positive statement in the public prints that he would not enter the race for the senatorship under any circumstances and more especially so as long as his personal friend and political ally Senator Simmons stands for renomination and election.

It is being talked that National Committeeman Josephus Daniels is one of the "progressives" who are thus seeking out a third candidate for the senate and that in the event the "progressives" fail to induce ex-Gov. Aycock to come into the contest ex-Speaker E. J. Justice or Chief Justice Walter Clark may be asked to get into the race. Indeed there is so much and so varied talk about the situation that it is hard to straighten it out into a definite statement. There is some doubt of the possibility of inducing Chief Justice Clark, to leave the supreme court for a senatorial race at this time.

Senator Simmons and his friends are already active in the preliminaries for his campaign for reelection and it is said that "he who runs may read" from the trend of affairs that Governor Kitchin and his friends are not allowing any grass to grow under their feet in movements to check progress of the Simmons campaign and further Kitchin interests in the impending senatorial campaign.

GOSSIP OF THE STAGE.

Robert T. Haines is to be a vaudeville star in a tabloid play.

William Gillette has been very successful with his Civil War play, Secret Service, and next will revive his other war play, Held by the Enemy.

Henry Miller is on tour in his latest successful drama, The Havoc, which he will present in the leading cities with the original New York company .

H. C. Barnabee, the venerable actor and singer, formerly of the Bostonians, fell in a hotel in a Massachusetts town where he was to have appeared at a club. He was injured painfully, but not seriously. Mr. Barnabee is in his seventy-ninth year.

It is generally believed that the lease of the New Theater, in New York, has been secured by George C. Tyler, of the Liebler Company, and that he will make two big productions there—one, Joseph and His Brethren, by Louis N. Parker, and the other, Robert Hichen's Fardner of Allah.

Gillette First On Shakespeare Stage.

New York, March 24.—The distinction of dedicating the new Shakespeare Theatre at Liverpool will go to William Gillette, who, with a company large enough to cast all the plays in his reportoire, will sail for Scotland immediately after his engagement at the Empire Theatre, which ends on April 15. The actor-author has just made a contract with Miss Louise Rutter by which she will be his leading actress throughout his British season. It will be her first professional appearance abroad.

In England Gillette will appear in two plays in addition to his present repertoire. He will thus be obliged to take the equivalent of about four carloads of scenery. At the close of his Liverpool engagement he probably will go to London, where, with John Drew, he has been paid the honor by the London Stage Coronation Committee of having been invited to appear at one of the London theatres during the festivities in June.

Gordon's Wife.

"Little Lord Fauntleroy," "The Prince and the Pauper," "Buster Brown," and now "Gordon's Wife"—there have been many plays in which the dramatic interest not only centered upon, but was actually borne on the puny shoulders of a child. But it would be difficult to search back for a list of titles in which the central childish figure in a play is free from the touch of either idealization or caricature. "Gordon's Wife," for the first time features the real "kid" of every-day life, not the guttersnipe, but the off-spring of well-to-do parents, and it is the human appeal of a seven-year-old boy that is true to life that vitalizes the play and makes it one of the most promising of the year.

"Gordon's Wife" is a new four-act modern drama by Bayard Veiller, who founded it upon Jackson D. Haag's "That which Never Dies." Liebler & Co., have made it one of their important productions of the season, equipping it with a very strong cast. Annie Russell is the star. Miss Russell has the only feminine role in the piece.

Scotia's Sons Unite to Encourage the Wearing of Their National Costume.

Supreme Court Justice Newburger yesterday signed the certificate of incorporation of the New York Scottish Highlanders, the declared objects of the organization being "to perpetuate and encourage the wearing of Highland costume, and to provide for parades and display drill evolutions for its (the costume's) best possible appearance before the public."

Why should not Scottish-Americans arrange that every man wear kilts in the fast approaching Easter parade on Fifth avenue? A band playing "The Campbells Are Coming" might head the parade, or a score of pipers emitting the soul-stiring melodies which have incited Scots to so many valorous deeds. The fair maids of New York in the parade might sport the plaids of the Camerons or the Douglases or the MacGregors or of any other clan whose women are as famous for their beauty as their virtue. Thus, surely, color and vivacity would be added to what ordinarily is but a dull show of so-called fashion. Nor would it matter if a few spindle-shanked striplings shivered in the unaccustomed breeze.

So, too, would be furthered other purposes sought by the incorporators of the New York Scottish Highlanders:

"To foster recollections of Scottish pipe music, literature and history, and to unite Scotchmen and their descendants in social intercourse."

Really, it is difficult to see what more Scottish-Americans are reaching after.

They have Andrew Carnegie, who, it is said, stocks every library he founds with several hundred copies of "The Scottish Chiefs."

They half golf, to which President Taft lends his weight and favor, to whom not even the Rio Grande is an insuperable bunker.

They have the Scotch highball, which already serves to unite Scotchmen and their descendants in social intercourse and which is serving to convert most convivial Americans into loyal Scots.

Perhaps they will be satisfied only when they substitute haggis for turkey on Thanksgiving Day and oatmeal cakes for mince pie.

Perhaps they would replace the American eagle with the thistle and "E pluribus unum" with "Nemo me impune lacessit" ("No one hurts me without being stung"), which is a mighty fine sentiment, anyhow.—New York World.

Warning to Railroad Men

Look out for severe and even dangerous kidney and bladder trouble resulting from years of railroading. Geo. E. Bell, 639 Third St., Fort Wayne, Ind., was many years a conductor on the Nickel Plate. He says: "Twenty years of railroading left my kidneys in terrible condition. There was a continual pain across my back and hips and my kidneys gave me much distress, and the action of my bladder was frequent and most painful. I got a supply of Foley Kidney Pills and the first bottle made a wonderful improvement and four bottles cured me completely. Since being cured I have recommended Foley Kidney Pills to many of my railroad friends.' Howard Gardner.

PRINCE-WELD.

High Point Newspaper Man to Wed Popular Young Woman of Atlanta, Ga., April 10-Bride-to-Be Has Visited in High Point and Has a Large Circle of Friends There.

High Point, March 23.—The Atlanta papers a few days ago carried the announcement of a coming wedding that will be of interest to the many North Carolina friends of the contracting parties. Mrs. T. D. Weld announced the engagement of her daughter, Bessie Abby, to Mr. Clarence Cecil Prince, the wedding to take place Monday morning, April 10, at the home of the bride, 200 North Boulevard, Atlanta, Ga.

Miss Abby is a sister of Mrs. Wilber Jones of this City and has visited here a number of times, where she has a large circle of friends and acquaintances. She is a young woman of rare beauty and possessed with a charming personality and her former visits to this city were always attended by a great deal of pleasure on the part of the young people here.

Mr. C. C. Prince is the assistant manager of the Southern Furniture Journal and, while he has resided here less than two years, he has by his courteous manner and his efficient services with his firm gained the confidence and respect of the business men. Before coming to this city, Mr. Prince was connected with some of the Atlanta papers and has had a number of years' experience in newspaper work.

Mr. Prince and his bride will, after a short trip, return to this city and be at home to their many friends on Morris avenue.

Peafowl as Pets.

There are few more beautiful birds for pets than peafowl, and a pair of them about a place add both beauty and interest. But, as most people know, there is a reverse to the picture. Both male and female peafowl are most destructive neighbors to a kitchen garden. Given plenty of space, they are charming pets. Also, from a utilitarian point of view, they are most excellent table fowl. Young peafowl have a taste between that of a capon and a guinea fowl, and as they grow to a fair size they are profitable if only as table birds. In old days the peacock used to be sent up to the table with his train arrayed over the dish.—Country Home.

When I went into my new house I desired to have one room in it as antique as possible. That room is my library. Among the furniture I desired was a desk. I looked about everywhere for one that I could be sure was very old and at last found one that filled my wishes. Upon getting it into my library I unlocked every drawer and after dusting it wiped it with a damp cloth. I noticed that every bit of space in the desk was converted into use except a rectangular area which seemed to have been omitted. A bit of veneering as large as the tip of my finger had become loosened. In pressing on it I released a secret drawer. There was only one piece of paper in the drawer, but it was important. It was addressed on the back to Peter Driscoll and was dated April 5, 1895. It read:

Send the balance of the property at once or take the consequences.

NEMO.

I am endowed with a fair amount of curiosity and, fortunately for me, have the means to gratify it. I telephoned a prominent detective agency to send me a good man. It sent me Evan Hunt. Showing him my desk, I told him where I had bought it and directed him to trace its ownership. The next day he reported that the storekeeper from whom I had purchased it had obtained it from the estate of Peter Driscoll, a man who had been found murdered one morning in his bed.

I was very much moved by the news. I saw at once that the discovery of the paper placed upon me an obligation to turn the letter over to the authorities. But as I am of a retiring disposition I did not relish being mixed up in a murder case. I concluded to prosecute my investigations further before making the matter public. Pledging my detective to secrecy, I showed him the paper I had taken from the desk and directed him to find the writer. The signature "Nemo" was undoubtedly assumed. But the detective believed the handwriting was that of the person who had made the demand since those who levy blackmail are not likely to impart a knowledge of what they are doing to any one else.

It was fully a month before he reported that he had found a man whom he believed to be the writer of the letter. No clew had ever been found to lead the police to the murderer of Peter Driscoll. Hunt had secured an acquaintance with Driscoll's family. They had been rich, but discovered at the death of their father that the property, which had consisted of interest bearing stocks and bonds, had disappeared. They had concluded that he had been speculating and lost it. They had been obliged to give up the handsome house in which they lived and had sold their furniture at auction. Hunt questioned them to discover if they suspected their father's property had passed to the man who had written the letter, but found they had never heard of him.

A great many discoveries are stumbled on. Hunt stumbled on the man who wrote the letter. He talked with every one who had known Driscoll and learned incidentally from one of Driscoll's acquaintances, a banker, that Driscoll had kept an account with him. Hunt succeeded in inducing the man to let him have a peep at Driscoll's account. One man, an Italian named Vechi, had received large amounts for which there was no explanation. Hunt then asked Driscoll's widow to permit him to look over her husband's papers. Among them he found a letter the handwriting of which corresponded with that of the note I had discovered. In the note it was disguised, but not so successfully but that Hunt suspected it was the same as in the letter he had compared it with. An expert proved that he was right. Vechi lived as a poor man, keeping a shop in which he dealt in odds and ends, curiosities, and did something in the way of autographs of prominent persons.

When we had laid our plans I went with Hunt to Vechi's shop. The Italian had as disagreeable a face as any man I ever knew. I shuddered at his knowing we possessed his secret lest he murder us to prevent our giving it to the authorities. Hunt said to him:

"Do you buy autographs here?"

"Sometimes."

"I have one I would like to sell you."

"Whose autograph is it?"

"Not a very distinguished person. Nevertheless we ask a large price for it."

"I don't wish to buy any autograph for a large price."

"You will pay a fortune for this one, I am sure, when you know whose it is."

"Whose is it?"

"Your own."

The man gave an involuntary start. Up to this time he did not suspect we had any other motive than to sell a bona fide autograph. Hunt's words "Your own" and the way the detective looked at him assured him that we had come on a very different errand.

"Let me see it," said the autograph dealer in a low voice.

"I will read you the note to which it is signed," said Hunt.

I had arranged with Hunt that when he drew the note I was to put my hand in my side pocket and grasp a revolver. I did so, and Hunt, standing well away from the Italian that he might not snatch the paper, read what was written, ending with the word "Nemo." Vechi heard his doom in the words and turned ghastly white. Hunt waited for him to speak, keeping his eyes riveted on him the while.

"How much do you ask for it?" finally Vechi asked.

"My friend here," replied the detective, pointing to me, "is its owner. He intends to give the proceeds of its sale to the family of the man to whom this note was addressed and who was"—

"The price is certain stocks and bonds that passed to this man Nemo. If they are all returned the note will be returned to the writer to do what he likes with it and no steps will be taken in the case. If every security is not given up Nemo will be arrested before he can leave his shop."

Vechi seemed to be thinking for a few moments, after which he asked:

"Tell me the amount."

We did not know the amount, but had provided for this.

"You alone know the amount at present, but since we know that this property has passed into the possession of Nemo we can at any time discover the exact amount. If we discover that he has withheld any of it we may reopen the case."

Vechi stood wavering. Whether he was hesitating as to the amount he would return or whether to defy us I don't know. Presently he said:

"I will buy your autograph, gentlemen, but I have not the price here. You must go with me to my house."

We went with him, as he suggested, I walking on one side of him, Hunt on the other, Hunt and I each having a hand on a revolver concealed. When we reached the house Vechi took us into a room, locked the door and said:

"What guarantee have I that you will keep your word?"

"None whatever," said Hunt. "You must rely on the promise of a gentleman."

Making a virtue of necessity, he opened a closet door, exposing a safe timbedded in the wall. The safe being painted like the wall, only its keyhole was perceptible. Introducing the key, he opened the safe door and took out a large bundle of securities. I looked them over and knew the value of most of them. I judged they were worth between $350,000 and $400,000. They were mostly coupon bonds, not the same property that had been transferred by Driscoll to Vechi.

"Is this all?" asked Hunt.

"Everything," replied Vechi. "I have no desire to leave anything amiss that will reopen this matter."

"Perhaps my friend," said Hunt, "may wish to know the hold you had on Driscoll."

"I have no such desire," I said. "The property is returned, and that is sufficient. The secret of blackmail if told might bring distress on an innocent family. Goodby, Mr. Nemo. So far as this matter is in my possession you may consider it closed."

We went from the shop to the Driscolls', where Mrs. Driscoll answered my card in person. I said to her:

"Madam, I have an important announcement to make to you, and I desire that you call into the room your sons and daughters to hear it."

Surprised, she complied with my request, and her children, mostly grown, were summoned. When they were all assembled I told the story of my purchase of the desk and the finding of the paper in the secret drawer. Then I entered upon Hunt's investigations (some of them recognized him) and lastly told of our visit to Vechi's shop. It was interesting to watch their features during my recital of our interview with the blackmailer, they growing more and more intent till the delivery of the property. When the recital was finished I took the securities from my pocket and handed them to Mrs. Driscoll, saying:

"There are securities affording an annual income of $20,000, in consideration of which we have taken the liberty of giving indemnity against prosecution for blackmail and"—

I shrank from speaking the dreadful word murder.

Every member of the family approved of all I had done and acknowledged in every possible way their indebtedness for the great favor I had done them. Before I left the house every one of us took an oath never to reveal anything of what had happened.

Mrs. Driscoll afterward informed me that so far as she could discover the equivalent of all the securities her husband had possessed was returned. Some $8,000 in cash was unaccounted for.

Life In a Lighthouse.

Five children, two dogs, a cat and a raccoon liv with the keepers of the Boston light, the beacon at the entrance to Boston harbor. They live on Little Brewster island, a tiny speck of land where there is only one plot of grass in a sheltered spot. All the year round they live there—in the summer, when the ocean is as green as young vine leaves after a rain, and in the winter, when the green is dimmed into gray and storms arise. The five children—to say nothing of the two dogs, the one cat and the lonely raccoon—cannot get to the mainland easily, and so they have a special schoolteacher of their own. They can study history by going outdoors and looking at the lighthouse. It is said to be the oldest in America. At any rate, it was built in 1715 by the British government.—Chicago News.

TWO SICKLY CHILDREN

Made Well By Vinol—Letters From Grateful Mothers.

New Haven, Conn.—"My little girl ever since her birth was frail and sickly and nothing seemed to do her any good, until we tried your cod liver and iron tonic, Vinol. As soon as she commenced to take it, I noticed an improvement in her health and appearance. She has now taken three bottles of Vinol and from the good it has done her I can say it will do all you claim for it in building up and strengthening frail and delicate children." (Name furnished on request.)

Another mother of Chicago, Ill., writes: "My little girl was thin, rundown, pale and without any appetite. Vinol gave her a good appetite,—she has rosy cheeks and has gained rapidly in flesh and strength.

"I cannot say too much in praise of Vinol for delicate, ailing children."

Leniors Win Out in Track Meet

Seniors, 40 points; intermediates, 27; juniors, 32. Such was the result of a highly interesting and closely contested track meet held yesterday afternoon in the auditorium by the three upper classes of the Greensboro high school.

The meet was held in preparation for an inter-high school contest, and by it Greensboro can now estimate her ability. The records made were highly creditable. A preliminary contest will be held next Wednesday to choose the team that will represent Greensboro at the inter-high school meet to be held at Guilford College a week from today.

For the seniors six men won points; for the juniors, five; while the defeat of the intermediates can be justly attributed to the fact that only four men were able to win points. However the work of Capt. Wm. Grimsley, of the latter team, was the feature of the contest. He entered five events and captured three first places, one second and one third, scoring nineteen points of his team's total. For the seniors, Yates starred by winning three first places. Clement, for the juniors, showed himself to be a crack long distance runner, for he won both of the endurance tests. Following are the events and winners:

100 yard dash—First, Yates, senior; second, Grimsley, (Capt. In.); third, Patterson, junior. Time: 11 1-5 seconds.

Half mile run—First, Clement, junior; second, Coffin, (Capt. Sr.); third, Murray, intermediate. Time: 2 minutes, 24 seconds.

12 pound shot put—First, Foust, senior; second, Dixon, junior; third, Marrs, junior. Distance: 33 feet, 5 1-4 inches.

High jump—First, Yates, senior; second, Bond, senior; third, Grimsley, intermediate. Height: 4 feet, 9 inches.

220 yard dash—First, Yates, senior; second, Hendrix, intermediate; third, Marrs, junior. Time: 28 seconds.

Pole vault—First, Grimsley, intermediate; second, Bain, junior; third, Coffin, senior. Height: 7 feet, 6 inches.

100 yard low hurdle race—First, Grimsley, intermediate; second, Bond, senior; third, Bain, junior. Time: 15 2-5.

Mile run—First, Clement, junior; second, Murray, intermediate; third, Gayle, senior. Time: 5 minutes, 51 2-5 seconds.

4:40 yard dash—First, McDuffie, senior; second, Marrs, junior; third, Lewis, intermediate. Time: 66 2-5 seconds.

Broad jump—First, Grimsley, intermediate; second, Patterson, junior; third, Coffin; senior. Distance: 17 feet, 1 1-2 inches.

Accurate baseball throw—First, Patterson, junior; second, Coffin, senior; third, Stratford, junior. Target was missed one foot.

Court Made a Zoo When Author Sues

London, March 24.—Horses, Pigs, cats, manuscripts of plays and stories and earlier divorce papers figured to the amusement of the audience at the trial today of a suit brought in the County Court at Northampton by the English author, Robert Harborough Sherard, against his wife, the American authoress, Irene Osgood, who was formerly Mrs. Charles Pigott Harvey, nee De Belot.

After hearing both versions in detail the presiding Judge decided that the defendant must return to her husband one horse, six pigs and one cat and the manuscripts in dispute, or pay him $210. Mrs. Sherard promptly entered an appeal from the judgment.

A suit for separation brought by the wife is pending and the husband in the present action alleges that the defendant purloined the above mentioned property, all he possessed, and so left him stranded. Sherard, describing his life at Guilsborough Hall, in Northampton, which is the property of his wife, referred to the home as "my Calvary." He had been treated like a dog, he declared and thrice thrown out of the place.

"I am 'Irene Osgood!' he shouted dramatically. "I wrote everything that she is supposed to have written in the last five years." He swore that Irene had given him $500 to be used in procuring a divorce from his wife so that he could marry her.

Sherard wept when questioned about the Persian cat, which he said, alone made life with Irene at Guilsborough Hall tolerable. He said she periodically expelled him from Guilsborough Hall when her temper was up, telling the Judge:

"You should understand the Guilsborough atmosphere. It was absolute monarchy. No one existed except Madame. The husband was treated there worse than the lowest dog."

At the Judge's expression of surprise Sherard added, "Yes, it was an American sort of an invention. One day we had a dispute at a luncheon party. Irene kicked me, saying, 'You want a separation. Take a damned good kick instead.'"

Mrs. Sherard, who is the author of "To a Nun Confessed" and "Servitude," and possesses an income of between $50,000 and $60,000 a year, entered the witness box and described how she met Sherard at Cannes, France. He was practically without funds, and she gave him, she said, $500 with which to buy clothes. She did not know at the time that he had been married previously and was not aware of the situation until a few days after their wedding, when she discovered his divorce papers. Suspecting that his alliance with her was illegal, she took possession of these documents. She denied her husband had written any of the works attributed to her.

Mrs. Sherard is a native of Virginia. Sherard's works included a biography of Oscar Wilde, "The Story of an Unhappy Friendship" and "After the Fault."

BATHING A GODDESS.

Liberty, Atop the National Capitol, Scrubbed Quadrennially.

The Goddess of Liberty, perched upon the capitol at Washington about one-fifth of a mile above the ground, is twenty feet high, built of bronze and weighs 16,000 pounds.

Not even the importance of the goddess saves her from the elements, and she has to be scrubbed once in about four years to keep her from falling to ruin. At each quadrennial cleaning she is found to be covered with great scales of oxidized bronze, to say nothing of bearing on her person the marks of hundreds of strokes of lightning that have hit her since the last time she was washed. All seven of the lightning rods on her shoulders and in her crown are usually completely fused and burned away and have to be renewed. Washing the goddess usually takes a week and costs $400 or $500, but painting the dome takes nine or ten tons of paint and the labor of thirty or forty men for about two months.

The dome has 800,000 square feet of surface, or the equivalent of about eight ordinary city blocks. The work is dangerous, especially for the men who put up and move the scaffoldings. The timbers have to be poked up through a hole just under the goddess and put together piece by piece. The dome is painted from movable ladders, and when it comes to shifting these over one of the ridges in the roof onlookers hold their breath. However, no one has been hurt yet, though there have been several narrow escapes. On one occasion a man slipped at the very foot of the great Goddess of Liberty and slid downward along the thirty foot curve that ends in midair. When he stopped his legs were dangling over 300 feet of space. One of the men threw him a rope and he climbed back and went on with his work unconcernedly.

The hardest thing to reach is the Indian headdress that the goddess wears instead of a cap. President Jefferson is responsible for this bonnet. He was at the helm of state when the goddess was cast, and he objected to her liberty cap. "The liberty cap," he said, "was the symbol of freedmen, not of freemen. When a slave became free in those days he assumed the cap. It has no place in the heraldry of men who were born free. We will have none of it."

When asked what, then, the goddess should wear, Jefferson is said to have replied, "The goddess is now an American goddess, and she ought to have a distinctively American headdress; certainly there is no other so very American as the Indian feather bonnet." So she was fitted out with one and placed on high to show the nations of the world what this young country could do when it really tried.—Farm and Fireside.

ELON COLLEGE

Elon College, N. C., March 24.—Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., editor of the Christian Sun, went to Norfolk on last Sunday to attend the 21st anniversary of the organization of the Memorial Christian Temple of that city. The program of this anniversary occasion consisted in three parts: Special services at 11 a. m. at which Dr. Atkinson preached from the theme, "Divine Methods of Renewing." An afternoon service in which a memorial tablet in memory of Rev. C. J. Jones, D. D., organizer and first pastor of Memorial Christian Temple, was unveiled, the eulogy on this occasion being pronounced by Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., of Suffolk, Va. In the evening at 7:30 there was a sermon delivered by Dr. Atkinson from the theme "Why I Am a Member of the Christian Church." The pastor of this church is the Rev. McDaniel Howsare who conducted such a great revival at Elon in January of this year.

The Young People's Convention of the Christian Church, South, will hold its second bi-annual session at Elon College, April 15th to 17th, or Saturday, Sunday and Monday of the Easter season. This convention has as its motto a Christian Endeavor Society in every church and a teacher training and organized class in every Sunday school, and while it has not been operative for more than two years, it has been productive of much good.

Peach Crop is Unusually Fine

J. Van Lindley returned yesterday from a trip to his orchards at Southern Pines and reports that unless there is a freeze or heavy frost the peach crop will be the best in five years. It was at first thought that the cold snap of last week had killed nearly half the fruit, but a closer inspection showed that this was not true. A portion of the fruit was killed, but this will only make the remainder better, Mr. Lindley says, and he expects that the yield will exceed 18,000 crates.

As to the fruit in this section Mr. Lindley stated that there would be about half a crop. It is predicted that the crop will be better than in several years as the fruit will be larger and better than if the trees had been loaded. The apple crop is not hurt.

Perfume Boxes.

From the earliest ages perfumes and sweet odors have been enshrined in beautiful receptacles as an outward expression of the exquisite imprisoned essence. At the court of Queen Elizabeth of England the pomander was the most important perfume holder of the time. These balls were composed of perfumes and spices worked together with a special kind of garden mold. The pomanders seen in the cut are among a collection on exhibition in the Kensington museum, London.

Broom Pincushion.

A very dainty novelty is the broom pincushion. For this you will require a large flat cork, a meat skewer (a new one, of course) and a few yards of baby ribbon in some bright shade.

Cut a small hole in the cork and insert the skewer firmly through it. Now wind skewer and cork together with the ribbon until they are entirely covered. Two bows on the skewer will hold the ribbon tight so far.

The broom effect you will gain by the pins. They must be driven thickly into the underside of the cork, holding the ribbon at that point and at the same time giving a very good imitation of a tiny metal broom. These make very nice favors at informal parties, club meetings, etc.

Your Mark.

An individual fashion of marking one's handkerchiefs and underwear is to write one's name or initials on each piece exactly as the signature is made. The characters are then worked with mercerized cotton in stem or outline stitch. This is an excellent means of identification in times of need.
